

Editorial

Many of our readers have expressed interest in having available through RMP a listing of tables of contents of other physics review journals. With this issue, we are inaugurating such a listing through the generous cooperation of the editors and publishers of a number of publications in this field. We hope this service will prove useful, and we would appreciate hearing from readers who find it so.

The editors of Reviews of Modern Physics will not undertake to make value judgments about the material in the referenced papers. Obviously, the editorial policies and objectives of these publications vary from one to another and only partially overlap the purposes of RMP. The willingness of the cooperating editors to provide us with their table of contents in advance of publication makes it possible for physicists to become aware more easily of concurrent studies and points of view.